Lenten Services

Wednesday evening Lenten Services will be a 15-20 minute devotional posted on Facebook live.

"If another member of the church sins against you, go and point out the fault when the two of you are alone. If the member listens to you, you have regained that one. But if you are not listened to, take one or two others along with you, so that every word may be confirmed by the evidence of two or three witnesses. If the member refuses to listen to them, tell it to the church; and if the offender refuses to listen even to the church, let such a one be to you as a Gentile and a tax collector."

Matthew 18:15-18

No matter where we go or what we are involved in there will almost always be some sort of conflict when two or more humans get together. I have heard it said that if you have 6 Lutherans in a room together and ask them what they think about something you can count on getting at least 7 different opinions.

Because of our sinful nature and the nature of humanity as a whole it is inevitable that disagreements between people will happen. There are times when words are spoken in anger or frustration or people misinterpret what has been said and suddenly feeling are hurt, tempers flare, and people stop talking to one another. It is no different in the church.

Unfortunately, what sometimes happens is that people start talking about what they are upset about, not with those who have upset them, but rather to others outside of the disagreement, and that is when gossip and rumors begin to run rampant, others are drawn into the discussion, and reputations are damaged, sometimes beyond repair. This kind of behavior is always damaging and if left unchecked or unresolved, becomes nearly impossible to rectify.

We have all experienced these kinds of situations, possibly on both sides, and we know how hurtful this kind of behavior can be.

But it doesn't have to be that way. Jesus gives us a way to resolve these very kinds of circumstances. In Matthew 18:15-18 he is very clear as to how we, as Christians, need to handle conflict and disagreements in our lives.

He says instead of talking to others outside the situation, go to the one who you have the disagreement with and see if you can work it out between the two of you. If that does not work take a couple of people with you and try to rectify the situation. If you can't work it out, take it to the church and if all else fails someone must leave the fellowship. For some, me included, these are difficult words to hear because we don't want to admit when we are wrong and when we are upset with someone we really don't want to talk to them.

But for the good of the church and for the good of her members Jesus ways are the best ways to handle conflicts. So, I encourage you all today to resolve any conflicts you might have in the way Jesus commands us. Go to the person or people you are in disagreement with and do your best to resolve things through prayer and conversation.

We all have the same mission at heart in the church, to share the Good News with all people and if we can resolve our differences that message will be proclaimed and heard much more clearly.

Peace,

Pastor Mark

Dreaming Together about the Future

As the church, we are the body of Christ in the world. God calls us to work, as we share the Good News and love our neighbors. This work often means we need to adapt.

I invite you to dream about your congregation. I wonder what the Holy Spirit is calling your ministry to do and to be? Is there an opportunity to make an impact in your community? Are there people who need help? Is there something that you or others are excited about?

Centered in worship, our congregations are called to action in our communities. Being a disciple of Christ means that we recognize resurrection not just for us, but for our world here and now. When things die in our congregations, it is okay, because God will raise up something in its place.

If you would like to do some dreaming together, I am happy to meet with your congregation. I would love to hear your stories, your hopes, and your opportunities for the future. Please reach out to me if you would like to set something up. Peace and blessings to you, and know that the Holy Spirit is with you!
